Video: 2020 Terrell H. Bell Awardee Michael H. Robinson

Greetings from Jonesboro, Georgia. I am Michael H. Robinson, the inaugural principal at the Martha Ellen Stilwell School of the Arts, which is a part of the Clayton County Public School System. I am honored to be an awardee of this very prestigious Terrell H. Bell which recognizes outstanding school leadership. I would like to first acknowledge how fortunate I am to have surrounded myself around some of the most brightest and dedicated individuals one could ever work with. And they are the falconer staff of our great school.

Next, I would like to recognize the best and the most talented group of students in the state of Georgia. Our students believe in us as a committed staff and they wholeheartedly know that we genuinely care about them socially, emotionally, and academically. Finally, today would not have been possible if we did not have the support of our community. Our parents, community partners believe in our vision and our mission. They fully understand their roles as they stand ready to support our goals from their individual perspective. So today is an exciting day for Stilwell School of the Arts and the entire Clayton County community. We are Clayton proud and we are one. Thank you.
